Excerpt from Memoir of the Life and Services of Vice-Admiral Sir Jahleel Brenton: Baronet, K. C. B Memoir should have any other value in your eyes, than as a token of the affectionate remembrance, with which I dwell upon the character of your much loved husband. In this respect, had I attempted more, I should not have succeeded better; for language never satisfies the requirements of the heart; and you would still have felt, that the half was yet unsaid after I had written all that I could, in endeavouring to express my admiration and regard.
